Tell a Story: Instead of just sharing facts or information, try turning your speech into a story.

People love listening to stories, and it can make your presentation more engaging and memorable. Think of a beginning, middle, and end to structure your speech like a story.

Speak Slowly and Clearly: It's important to speak slowly and clearly so everyone can understand you. Try not to rush through your speech. Taking your time shows confidence and helps your audience absorb what you're saying.

Use Visuals: Bring in some visual aids, like pictures, props, or simple diagrams. These can help explain your points better and keep your audience interested. Plus, having something to show can make you feel more confident.

Add a Little Humor: If you can, add a bit of humor to your speech. A funny story or a light-hearted joke can make your audience smile and pay more attention. Just make sure it's
