

Dear President of Brazil,

Hello, my name is Gavin McCormack, and I am a Grade 8 student at our local school. I am writing to you because I am very worried about the deforestation of the Amazon rainforest and I want to ask you to take action to protect it.

The Amazon rainforest is very important for our planet. It provides oxygen, stores carbon, and is home to many species of plants and animals. But deforestation is destroying this special place, causing climate change and the loss of biodiversity.

As the leader of Brazil, you can make a big difference. So, I am asking you to do the following things:

1. Stop Illegal Deforestation: Make sure there are strict laws to stop illegal logging, mining, and farming in the Amazon. People who break these laws should be punished.
2. Support Conservation Projects: Give more money to projects that aim to protect and restore the rainforest. Help local communities develop in a way that doesn't harm the forest.
3. Protect Indigenous Peoples: Ensure the rights of Indigenous peoples who live in the Amazon are protected. They know how to take care of the forest and should be allowed to live on their land without any threat.
4. Promote Sustainable Farming: Encourage farmers to use methods that do not involve cutting down the forest. Support them in adopting practices that protect the environment.
5. Raise Awareness: Use your influence to tell the world how important the Amazon is and why we need to protect it. Work with other countries to reduce deforestation globally.

I believe that with your leadership, we can make a positive change. Your commitment to protecting the Amazon can inspire young people like me who care about the environment.

Could you please tell us how students like me can help save the Amazon? What can we do in our daily lives to support rainforest conservation? How can we get our communities involved?

Thank you very much for reading my letter. I hope to hear back from you and use your advice to make a positive impact in my community.

Your help could inspire not just me, but many other young people, to take action and help protect our planet for the future.

Yours sincerely,

Gavin McCormack

Ten Tips to Write a Letter with Clear Demands

- Introduce Yourself Clearly: Begin your letter by introducing yourself. Mention your name, grade, and school to provide context and establish who you are.
- State Your Purpose: Clearly explain the reason for writing the letter. Express your concern about deforestation and your hope that the leader can make a positive change.
- Understand Your Audience: Research the person you are writing to. Mention their role and how they can help with the issue you care about.
- Use Strong Vocabulary: Choose words that convey urgency and importance. Use words like "urgent," "critical," "vital," and "necessary."
- Provide Relevant Information: Include important facts and details related to deforestation. Explain how it affects the environment and why it's crucial to address it.
- Showcase the Importance: Explain why the issue is important to you personally. Use compelling reasons and examples to highlight its significance.
- Make Clear Demands: Specify what actions you want the leader to take. Be clear and direct about your requests.
- Be Respectful and Polite: Maintain a respectful and polite tone throughout the letter. Address the recipient properly and use courteous language.
- Ask Specific Questions: Include questions that you want the recipient to answer. This shows your interest in their perspective and invites further engagement.
- End with a Strong Conclusion: Summarise your main points and express your hope for a positive response. Thank the recipient for their time and consideration, and mention how their actions can make a difference.
