

Dear Local Councillor,

Hello, my name is Gavin McCormack and I am a Grade 8 student. I am writing to you with a heavy heart about the condition of our local war memorial. Seeing it neglected and deteriorating is deeply upsetting, especially because my grandfather was a brave veteran. This memorial stands as a tribute to him and many others who sacrificed so much for our freedoms, and it pains me to see it forgotten.

Every time I pass by the memorial, I feel a profound sadness. It's more than just a structure; it's a symbol of courage and sacrifice. The thought of it crumbling feels like we're letting down those who fought for us. We owe it to them to keep their memory alive and respected.

I believe restoring the memorial would not only honour their bravery but also reconnect our community with its history. It would teach young people like me the importance of remembrance and gratitude. Could we perhaps raise funds or organize community volunteer days to help repair it? I am willing to do whatever I can to help spearhead these efforts.

Please, can we work together to restore the dignity of this sacred site? It deserves to be a place where we can all reflect on the great sacrifices made for us, not one where we walk by without a second glance.

Thank you for reading my heartfelt concerns. I am hopeful that with your support, we can take action to preserve this important part of our heritage. I look forward to your response and am eager to contribute to making this restoration a reality.

Yours sincerely,

Gavin McCormack

Ten Tips to Write a Letter Using Your Raw Emotions and Thoughts

Feel Your Emotions: Before you start writing, think about how you feel about the topic. Are you happy, sad, angry, or hopeful? Use these emotions to help you write your letter.

Find a Real Story: Look up a true story that relates to what you're writing about. Including this in your letter can make it more interesting and powerful.

Ask Questions: Write your letter like you're talking to someone. Ask questions to make the person reading your letter think and want to learn more.

Keep It Clear: Use simple words so that everyone who reads your letter can understand what you are saying. Clear writing is often the most powerful.

Use Descriptive Language: Try to describe things so well that the reader can see them in their mind. This helps make your letter more vivid and engaging.

Be Honest: Share what you truly think and feel. When you're real, your words can make a stronger connection.

Imagine What Could Be: Talk about how you hope things will change for the better. This can make your reader feel hopeful and inspired.

Take a Break: After you write your letter, take a little break before reading it again. This can help you see ways to make your letter even better.

Get Some Advice: Show your letter to someone you trust and see what they think. They can offer advice to help improve your message.

Believe in Your Words: Have confidence in what you have to say. You are important, and your words can inspire change.
