

This week, you have a special job: assist with Gender Equality! Your job, Pick a task you like from Sustainable Development Goal 5: Gender Equality. Work on your own, with a group or a class and spend your week trying to achieve as many from the list below as you can.

Assess the amount of boys and girls in your school or community. Do they all have access to the same things? List down what services, clubs, situations or choices are not accessible to the other gender and identify if any of these can be made accessible to everyone.

Start a Book Club: Focus on books written by both men and women and about strong characters. Discuss these stories and what they teach us about equality and empowerment.

Host a Gender Equality Film Festival: Select films and documentaries that explore gender issues, followed by discussions. It's a great way to learn more about gender equality around the world and spark conversation.

Community Library Project: Set up a community library corner with books that focus on strong characters of all genders, promoting stories of empowerment and equality. Encourage both boys and girls to read and discuss these stories together.

Cut out all the articles in a newspaper that talk about male and female success! Are they evenly balanced? Make a collage to show your findings and talk to the class about this!

5 GENDER EQUALITY

Organize a "Walk in Their Shoes" Day: Everyone gets to pair up with someone of another gender to learn about a day in the life of their partner, understanding different perspectives and challenges they might face because of gender stereotypes.

Develop an Equality Charter for Your School: Work with students, teachers, and staff to create a charter that outlines how everyone will work towards gender equality at school, including respecting everyone's rights and opportunities.

Invite a local politician onto school to talk about what the government is doing to close the gap between genders and how they can assist the school in this plight.

Research a local charity that supports gender equality. What work do they do to achieve this? Invite the CEO into school to talk to everyone about the work they do.

Organize a Gender Equality Poster Contest: Get your friends and classmates to create posters that promote gender equality. Display them around your school to spread the message.

Collaborate on a Gender Equality Mural: Work together on a big, beautiful mural that represents what gender equality means to you and your classmates. It could be a mix of words and pictures, showing everyone's vision of a fair world.

Peer Teaching Sessions: Older students can prepare lessons or presentations about inspiring figures of all genders who have made significant contributions to society, teaching younger students about equality and diversity.

Invite a parent to visit school and talk about their experience as a young person and discuss how things have changed today.

"Alone We Can Change Today, But Together We Can Change Forever."
