() upschool

Gavin McCormack Pinkerton Primary School Pinkerton Street Sydney 2037

Dear Head of the World Bank,

Hello, my name is Gavin McCormack. I've been learning a lot about the Sustainable Development Goals at school, especially SDG 8 – Decent Work and Economic Growth. It's made me think a lot about how everyone in the world can have a fair chance at getting good jobs and how we can grow our economies without leaving anyone behind.

I read about a project in Rwanda where schools started teaching kids how to use computers and other technology. This is great because it means when these kids grow up, they'll have the skills to get good jobs in technology. This not only helps them but also makes companies interested in setting up in Rwanda, which is good for the country's economy.

Another story is from Brazil, where people started doing farming in a way that's good for the planet. This has created more jobs for locals and helps make sure there's enough food for everyone. These kinds of jobs that help the planet and give people work are really important.

These stories make me wonder how we can do more things like this in other parts of the world. How can the World Bank help spread these good ideas to other places?

What can we all do to make sure that when some places get better and grow, everyone else does too?

Could the World Bank help start more projects that use technology and take care of the planet, creating more jobs for people everywhere?

I'm writing to you because I think if we all work together, we can make a big difference. I'd love to hear your thoughts on how the World Bank can help make sure everyone has access to good jobs and help our economies grow in a way that's good for the planet.

Thank you for reading my letter. I'm really interested in hearing how you think we can work together to make the world a better place for everyone.

Sincerely,

Gavin McCormack

Ten Tips to Write a Letter linking Current Events and News

Feel First: Start by exploring your emotions about the topic. Are you excited, worried, or inspired? Let those feelings guide your writing.

Do Your Research: Sharing a real and current story related to the topic can make your letter more engaging and powerful.

Ask Questions: Approach your letter as if you're having a conversation. Asking questions can spark curiosity and encourage the reader to think more deeply.

Keep it Simple: Use straightforward language. Clarity is more impactful than complexity.

Paint Pictures with Words: Describe your thoughts vividly. Use descriptive language to help the reader visualize the issue or your vision for the future.

Be Real: Express your genuine thoughts and feelings. Authenticity connects more than anything else.

Imagine the Future: Share your hopes and dreams for how things could improve. This can leave the reader feeling optimistic and motivated.

Take a Break, Then Review: After finishing your draft, step away for a bit. Returning with fresh eyes can help you spot opportunities to refine your Get Feedback: Before sending your letter, ask someone you trust to read it. Their insights can help you strengthen your message.

Believe in Yourself: Trust that your voice matters. You have the power to inspire change, regardless of your age.

